Aylmer victim was 'full of life,' aunt says

Travis Votour. Woman 'in shock' over loss of young nephew found dead in home

TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

The aunt of an Aylmer man says she is in shock after learning her young nephew and his girlfriend were found dead inside their home Monday afternoon.

Cindy Votour says she is still coming to grips with the loss of Travis Votour, whose body, along with that of his girlfriend Amanda Trotter, was found inside their home at 158 Terrasse Eardley in Aylmer shortly before 1 p.m. Monday. Votour said her nephew loved life and had a good sense of humour.

"Travis was a free-loving spirit and was full of life and was always joking around," Cindy Votour told Metro Tuesday morning.

"His death has me in shock." Police responded to the grisly double homicide around 12:50 p.m. after Trotter's mother Victoria Lebrasseur discovered the two bodies. She has been posting heartbreaking messages on Facebook as she tries to cope with the loss of her daughter.

"Please give us justice please god find these monsters to bring justice for Amanda and Travis," she wrote on her Facebook page Tuesday morning.

"I talked to my baby every day. Now they took that away from me. So many pieces of my heart destroyed. I love you so much Amanda mom thinks she is having the worst nightmare in history."

The posts followed earlier heart-wrenching messages from the grief-stricken mother, who said the scene was "full of blood" after discovering the bodies.

Police remain tight-lipped about the case, but autopsies are scheduled early this week to determine how the pair, both in their twenties, died. Police also found Trotter's three-year-old daughter inside the home, safe and unharmed. She is now under family care.

Neighbours told Metro the couple had kept mostly to themselves since renting the home in the quiet neighbourhood in August.

Anyone with any information on the two deaths can contact investigators at 819-243-2346, ext. 6677. Information will be treated as confidential and can be submitted anonymously.

Prisoner given clothing only after she calmed down: Cop

Hearing. Female prisoner sat topless in cell with soiled pants for three hours

STEVE COLLINS
ottawa@metronews.ca

Ottawa Police Sgt. Steven Desjourdy said he first worried that a female prisoner might be suicidal when she struggled with cellblock attendants, who had to wrestle her to the ground.

"In my mind, this is where I say 'This is not right. This person is irrational. It's unjustified,'" he said of the sudden and violent conflict with officers, during which she kicked Special Const. Melanie Morris.

Desjourdy was testifying on the second day of his hearing on a charge of discreditable conduct under the Police Services Act.

The allegation stems from a Sept. 6, 2008 cellblock incident, during which Desjourdy cut the shirt and bra off the prisoner, who cannot be named. He maintains he took her clothes for her safety: "This person is not well. She's not going into a cell with something she could harm herself with."

Desjourdy was charged with sexual assault but acquitted in April.

The prisoner was left in a cell, topless and with soiled pants, for about three hours and fifteen minutes before she was given disposable clothing known as a "blue suit."

Desjourdy said the delay was in part because of the prisoner's "bizarre" behaviour in the cell, including extended pacing and seeming attempts to slip between the cell bars. Only when she calmed down, he said, was she given the clothing.

There were no "white suits," clothing specifically designed to protect the wearer from self-harm, available in the cellblock that morning, he said.

Desjourdy's cross-examination by prosecutor Bob Houston continues on Wednesday.

Sexual assault never happened: Lawyer

Clinton Russell leaves the Elgin Street courthouse on the second day of his sexual assault trial in Ottawa on Oct. 2, 2013. MIKE CARROCCETTO FOR METRO

An intellectually delayed woman who admitted to having a "foggy" memory of an alleged sexual assault by a hospital security guard in 2010 denied Tuesday an assertion from the accused's lawyer that the incident never actually happened.

The woman, who cannot be named to protect her identity, testified for a second day in the second trial of 44-year-old Clinton Russell.

The former security guard at The Ottawa Hospital was convicted in his first trial last October of sexual assault and sexual exploitation of a person with a disability. In that case, the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that Russell forced a developmentally delayed woman in her late 20s to perform oral sex on him in December 2011.

Russell is facing the same charges in this second trial involving a second complainant who suffers from OCD and testified she has the mental age of an eight-year-old.

She was 18 at the time of the alleged incident in the summer of 2010 and claims Russell led her to a bathroom at the Civic Campus and asked her to perform oral sex in exchange for four cigarettes and a toonie to buy chocolate milk.

The woman, now 22, broke down in tears and appeared stressed during cross-examination by Russell's lawyer, Ian Carter.

Her previous testimony was that the incident occurred in a men's washroom, but on Tuesday she told Carter that was a unisex washroom near the rear of the hospital.

"It's very foggy in my mind," she testified.

She appeared dumfounded when Carter ended a series of open-ended questions by suggesting to her that she never actually went to the washroom with Russell.

Sens Foundation announces $250K for Bayshore Park rink

'Go, Sens, go!'

Foundation set to build 20 outdoor rinks under Sens RINK Project

LUCY SCHOLEY
ottawa@metronews.ca

Hockey enthusiasts will be able to lace up their skates at Bayshore Park's refurbished outdoor rink next winter.

The Ottawa Senators Foundation announced the opening of its third outdoor rink under the Sens RINK Project (Recreational Investments in Neighbourhood for Kids), which will break ground in April.

The foundation, which plans to build a total of 20 outdoor rinks in the National Capital Region, made the announcement at the Accora Centre Jan. 7, while dozens of elementary school kids donning Ottawa Senators jerseys cheered "Go, Sens, Go!"

Like the other rinks, the total cost is $250,000 — with $160,000 going towards re-vamping the current rink and the rest towards upgrading Bayshore Park.

Ferguslea Properties Limited, the owner of a large swath of rental units near the Bayshore Shopping Centre, is contributing $160,000 and the City of Ottawa is also funding the project.

The new rink will be 85-feet-by-190-feet and the park will get a new stage and new recreation centre. This summer, kids will be able to play basketball and pick-up ball hockey on the rink space.

"There's 7,000 residents surrounding this rink, so to have free, active programming after school and on weekends is something that we're really thrilled to be able to do," said Danielle Robinson, president of the Ottawa Senators Foundation.

Mark Taylor, councillor for the Bay Ward, said Bayshore Park "needs a face-lift." It's one piece of a giant revitalization of the area,

Social housing grows, still 'a long way to go'

Ottawa Centre NDP MP Paul Dewar chats with people during lunch at the Shepherds of Good Hope March 2012. METRO FILE

Local shelters may struggle with overflow under frigid weather, but residents in both Gatineau and Ottawa will soon have more social housing options.

Gatineau set aside $2.1 million in its 2014 budget towards 125 new social housing units, while Ottawa has been investing $14 million annually since 2011.

"We're helping our citizens to stay out of the street," said Alain d'Entremont, director of public relations for Gatineau. He said Gatineau has aimed to contribute funding for 125 social housing units every year for the past decade — and so far has built 1,500 units over that timeframe.

While social housing spending between Ottawa and Gatineau seems discrepant, the breakdown is more complicated.

Ottawa manages about two-thirds of its community housing units, while co-operatives and non-profit organizations oversee the rest. Meanwhile Gatineau acts less as a manager and more as a partner in its social housing initiatives. Because of that, the city does not have statistics on its waiting list for social housing.

There are 9,700 households on Ottawa's social housing waiting list, according to Stephen Arbuckle, the city's manager of housing services.

Mike Bulthuis, executive director of the Alliance to End

Homelessness Ottawa, said the $14 million investment is encouraging, but more could be done.

"Is it enough? No. Is it a positive thing? Yes," he told Metro Tuesday. Apart from more funding, he said Ottawa needs incentives to encourage developers to build more social housing units, while the federal government needs to play a more "meaningful" role in social housing.

Bulthuis said that for many Ottawa residents, emergency shelters are not just for cold snaps — they provide lodgings for months, or even years.

"We know we have a long way to go," he said.

Did you look up from a screen to read this?

Odds are you did, says a recent report. Half of Canadians say they spend close to 90% of their free time staring at a TV, tablet or smartphone

Canadian smartphone owners spend an average of about 86 per cent of their free time looking at one of their many screens, a recently released poll suggests. ISTOCK

Canadian smartphone owners estimate they spend an average of nearly 90 per cent of their free time staring at one of the many screens they own, suggests a recently released report.

In an online poll of 28,000 Canadians — conducted in August by Ipsos on behalf of Google — half the respondents said they owned a smartphone. Of the smartphone users, 99 per cent also had a computer, 88 per cent had a TV, and 39 per cent had a tablet.

Smartphone owners admitted that they'd peg their screen time, including watching TV, using a computer, tablet or e-reader at about 86 per cent of their free time.

On the flip side, they figured they spent only 14 per cent of their leisure time daily listening to the radio, reading a printed page or enjoying other non-digital activities.

On average, smartphone owners said they spent about an hour and a half each day on their phone for personal use, with about 56 per cent happening outside the home.

Tablet owners said they were using their device for about an hour and 15 minutes daily, and three-quarters of that usage was at home.

On the other hand...

Multi-tasking users were most likely to be on their phone while watching TV, followed by a pairing of using their phone and their computer together, and then using their tablet while channel surfing.

- Half of all TV viewers said they always have their phone, tablet or computer with them while looking for something to watch.

Computer users said they spent three hours and 10 minutes working or playing on a PC daily in their personal time, including an hour away from home.

When asked about using their devices simultaneously — for example, swiping and tapping on a phone or tablet while watching TV — 87 per cent said they do it at least once a week.

Vancouver. Protesters who disrupted Harper event won't be charged

Vancouver police say they won't be pursuing criminal charges against two climate-change protesters who came within touching distance of Prime Minister Stephen Harper on a stage at an event in Vancouver.

The protesters, who have publicly identified themselves as Sean Devlin and Shireen Soofi, walked on stage during a Vancouver Board of Trade question-and-answer event at a downtown hotel on Monday.

They were quickly removed and the event carried on, but the stunt raised questions about how two activists could get that close to Harper.

Sgt. Randy Fincham said

Vancouver police consulted with the RCMP and decided not to recommend charges.

"After consultation with both (the RCMP and the Crown), it was determined that it wasn't in the public's best interest to pursue an investigation into criminal charges," Fincham said in an interview Tuesday.

On Monday, the activists each held up a sign attacking Harper's record on climate change. One sign said "Climate Justice Now," while the other featured a dark line crossed through the phrase "Conservatives Take Climate Change Seriously." THE CANADIAN PRESS

U.S. woman who assisted with mom's suicide gets time served

Shirley Vann, left, her daughter Linda Jean McNall and their two dogs are shown in this family photo. A U.S. mental health advocate hopes an Arizona woman who admits she helped her mother commit suicide in Canada will continue to get care if she's deported. THE CANADIAN PRESS/HANDOUT

An Alberta judge has agreed that an American woman who pleaded guilty to helping her mother kill herself should not have to spend any more time behind bars.

Judge Charles Gardener sentenced Linda Jean McNall to eight months of time already served on the rare charge of aiding suicide in the death of her 79-year-old mother, Shirley Vann. That was the recommendation made by both the Crown and the defence.

Court heard details about a suicide pact McNall made with Vann. Both had health problems and had cared for one another for decades.

Last spring, after Vann's health deteriorated, they sold their belongings, left behind mounting medical bills and drove from Sierra Vista, Ariz., to Canada's Rocky Mountains.

They pitched a tent near Hinton, 300 kilometres west of Edmonton, injected themselves and their two pet dogs with insulin, swallowed sleeping pills and opened a propane tank.

Vann and the animals died, but McNall, 53, survived.

McNall, who had worked as a nurse, pleaded guilty to the crime last month. The sentence means McNall, who still suffers from depression and was being treated at Alberta Hospital, will be deported to Arizona.

McNall's lawyer, Laura Stevens, said her client will spend the night in jail in Edmonton and will be flown back to Phoenix on Wednesday. There, Stevens said, her client is scheduled to be evaluated by a case worker and a crisis management team.

Gardener noted the progress McNall had been making recently at Alberta Hospital after two more suicide attempts while there.

"I take some comfort that your condition is improving," he told McNall, who was seated in the prisoner's box. "I hope you will receive some ongoing treatment and comfort ... and that you eventually find worth and value in your life."

Brutal cold settled over parts of the U.S., sending the mercury plummeting Tuesday from New York and Washington to Atlanta, Nashville and Birmingham, where many people have little experience dealing with freezing weather.

The morning weather map for the eastern half of the U.S. looked like an algebra worksheet: lots of small, negative numbers. In fact, the Midwest and the East were colder than much of Antarctica.

Georgia, where the temperature dropped into the single digits, was colder than many cities in Alaska. While Kodiak and Juneau registered 4 and Anchorage was at -2, Atlanta dipped to -14 degrees early in the morning, or nearly 17 degrees below the average low this time of year.

"This is severely cold for these parts," said Brian Lynn, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Peachtree City, Ga.

Farther south in Pensacola, Fla., a Gulf Coast city better known for its white sand beaches than frost, streets normally filled with joggers, bikers and people walking dogs were deserted early Tuesday as the morning remained in the negative teens. Downtown, Monica Anderson and Tommy Howard jumped up and down and blew on their hands while they waited for a bus, struggling to stay warm.

Anderson said she couldn't recall it ever being so cold.

"I'm not used to it. It is best just to stay inside until it gets better," said Anderson.

Fugitive too cold to get far, gives up

Just how cold is it in the U.S.? Apparently cold enough for an escaped prisoner to turn himself in. Authorities say the inmate escaped from a minimum security facility in Kentucky on Sunday. As temperatures dropped far below freezing Monday, they say he walked into a motel and asked the clerk to call police. Lexington police spokeswoman Sherelle Roberts says 42-year-old Robert Vick told the clerk he wanted to turn himself in and escape the arctic air. Roberts says Vick was checked out by paramedics and returned to Blackburn Correctional Complex.

Extreme cold causes delays at Toronto airport

Frustrated passengers line up during flight delays and cancellations due to extreme cold weather and wind chill at Pearson International Airport in Toronto on Tuesday. AARON VINCENT ELKAIM/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Extreme cold in the Toronto area, where temperatures plunged to about -40 C overnight with the wind chill, caused a rash of delays and flight cancellations Tuesday at Pearson International Airport.

The airport put a so-called ground freeze on all North American arrivals through the morning, but it was lifted at 10 a.m. More than 600 flights were cancelled throughout the day and many more were delayed.

The freeze was put in place because of the extreme cold's effects on equipment and efforts to minimize time outdoors for employees, said Greater Toronto Airports Authority spokeswoman Sherleen Daghtani.

"It was the extreme weather conditions that impacted safe operations and employee safety," she said. "When it comes to refuelling or removing the bags, those need to be done by employees."

The problems were reportedly compounded by a backlog of planes waiting for gates to open to off-load passengers, travellers waiting hours to collect their luggage and long lineups snaking through Pearson's terminals.

Robert Palmer, spokesman for WestJet, said the company's planes couldn't take off Monday night, creating a bottleneck at the gates.

"As soon as a gate became available, we would push a plane to that gate, we would let the people off. We did not take their baggage off because that would've taken extra time and meanwhile there was a lineup of people in planes waiting to get off the plane," he said.

Connie Smith said she'd dealt with several weather-related delays and missed connections on her journey from Edmonton back to her home in Newfoundland. She and her husband were stranded overnight in Toronto. "This is horrible, just the waiting and the lineups. It should be more organized," she said as her husband stood in line at a service counter.

The first batch of Syrian poison gas chemicals was loaded onto a Danish cargo ship and taken out of the country Tuesday, a week later than initially planned, the United Nations announced.

Taliban deny sending girl, 10, to blow up checkpoint

Human rights groups scoff. Insurgents have dispatched children for suicide bombings, but girls have been used only rarely, they say

The Taliban denied Tuesday that they dispatched a 10-year-old girl to carry out a suicide attack against Afghan police, a day after the girl said her brother wrapped her in an explosives-packed vest but that she refused to blow herself up at a checkpoint in Helmand province.

ern Afghan province arrested the girl's father, Abdul Ghfar, and were searching for the brother, a police commander said. The girl, who was detained Monday and identified herself only as Spozhmai, said her brother is a Taliban commander.

Addressing television cameras on Monday, she said her brother, Zahir, told her to approach a checkpoint and ask the deputy commander for a ride with him to neighbouring Kunar province. "I agreed, then he attached the vest on my body and told me to spend the night here and leave in the morning," she said.

But after she and her brother spent the night somewhere, she said she had second thoughts. "I said I won't go, then he took off the vest and tried to convince me that they (police) will die and I will remain alive," Spozhmai said. She said her brother then fled with the vest.

Canada Goose gets pecked back over trademark lawsuit

Statement of defence.

Feathers are flying as retailers hiss at each other over allegations of selling knockoff parkas

Canada Goose is trying to "bully" Sears Canada Inc. and other retailers through litigation, Sears is alleging in court documents as it hits back at a trademark infringement lawsuit.

The parka maker's real motive is to curtail the sales of lower-priced winter jackets so Canada Goose can keep selling its products "at a huge mark up," Sears alleges.

Canada Goose alleges in a lawsuit filed late last year that Sears is selling knockoffs of its highly distinctive coats.

The department store has now filed its statement of defence in Federal Court and is taking direct aim not just at this particular lawsuit, but what the retailer calls Canada

Goose's "campaign of intimidation."

Canada Goose is trying to claim the exclusive right to sell any winter coat with a fur collar "of any sort" or with a circular logo on its sleeve, Sears alleges in its statement of defence.

Neither Sears' nor Canada Goose's allegations have been proven in court.

Canada Goose alleges that Sears is intentionally trying to mislead consumers into believing they're buying a "lower-end" Canada Goose jacket, the parka maker alleges in its lawsuit.

In its statement of defence, Sears says no consumer could confuse a Canada Goose jacket with Sears' Alpinetek coats. Sears has held a trademark for the Alpinetek logo since 1998, Sears wrote in its defence.

We see more than numbers.

MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

You have to feel sorry for Michael Bay.

Not because he's the director of epic Hollywood stinkers such as the Transformers movies and classic clunkers such as Pearl Harbour and Bad Boys II.

No, we have to send Michael a hug because he has suffered through the worst experience ever. There he was at the giant Consumer Electronics Show in Vegas on Monday, presenting on behalf of the 105-inch, curved-screen TV from Samsung, when he lost his place on the teleprompter and couldn't find it again.

After stammering and shuffling for the world's longest minute, he walked off the stage, leaving the Samsung guy holding the bag.

An ignominious retreat for the whiz kid who learned at the knees of George Lucas and Steven Spielberg to become one of the richest Masters of Tinsel Town, worth more than $400 million, according to Celebrity Net Worth.

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

The other reason we should feel sorry for Michael Bay is that nobody else is. Going mute at the world's foremost consumer electronics show is bad enough, but the peanut gallery is howling with delight.

Someone said he only did what so many before him have wanted to do: walk out of a Michael Bay production. Someone else observed that it was the first time he seemed uncomfortable without a script.

Whoa. Tough crowd.

And that's going to make it tougher for the 75 per cent of us who fear public speaking more than death itself. Yes, that's true.

Glossophobia, as the fear of public speaking is called, is the No. 1 phobia, beating out the fear of death, and No. 3, fear of spiders. Jerry Seinfeld once observed that at a funeral, most of us would rather be in the casket instead of giving the eulogy.

Even if it's just standing in front of the class to spell glossophobia, most of us would rather die. My first real bout with stage fright happened in Grade 8, when I was required to stand in front of a packed school gym and play Moon River on the trombone. Somehow I got through the whole thing even though the sheet music kept slipping off the stand. But I kept thinking: There are two people in the audience who actually want to hear this, and I'm only sure about one of them (my mother).

No word on whether Michael Bay's mother was in the audience at CES, but it's a good idea for the jackals to remember that he has one, and she must be suffering agonies for her boy. For the sake of his mother, get off his case.

And if that doesn't move you to sympathy, you can at least learn from this ghastly experience. The next time you have to stand in front of an audience, before you go on, remember what happened to Michael Bay.

If that doesn't cause you to break into a flop sweat, nothing will.

Pack A.D. to engage new fans with Do Not Engage Shift in sound.

Garage-rock duo push for a bigger audience with latest album

Vancouver garage-rock duo the Pack A.D. finally cleaved their way onto Canadian airwaves with 2011's Unpersons, a record that strayed far from the skeletal hard blues that marked their early work.

With Do Not Engage — out Jan. 28 — the band is pushing its newfound tunefulness even further, and the duo is blunt when asked to describe the shift in sound.

"Now our songs have things like choruses," said drummer Maya Miller during a recent chat in Toronto. "They never used to. Truthfully, they do have more melodies now."

Shedding their nascent primal-blues leanings almost completely, the Pack A.D. here channel the melodic fuzz of '90s post-grunge and lo-fi for a concise set of 11 songs that recall a range of influences including the Breeders, the Grifters and Superchunk.

There's still variety within that framework. "There's no real consistency but I kind of like that," singer Becky Black muses, but the common thread is a new accessibility.

And that pop craft arrived at a fortuitous time for the band, seemingly perched on the cusp of a breakthrough.

Since Unpersons came out, they became Juno Award nominees for breakthrough group (natch), signed with Nettwerk Records — such a sufficiently large label that Black marvels

"there's a lot more people to remember" — and whisked their undomesticated live show across some larger stages, including a gig last month opening for the Arctic Monkeys.

Miller and Black acknowledge that a desire to capitalize on such opportunities did influence their songwriting.

"I think it obviously played a part in coming up with this album," Miller said.

"I also think people now can dance to our new album," she added. "I think it's been harder to dance to our music in the past. We used to have less opportunity for that. It was very odd music. It didn't really go anywhere. So maybe it's going somewhere."

If it sounds as though the pair is unhappy with their earliest work — 2008's Tintype and Funeral Mixtape — well, that's pretty accurate.

Those elemental recordings helped the duo gather a following, but they're not representative of where the group is at now.

"For me, I tried to think we didn't do those first two albums," Miller said. "Not in a really bad way, but it just feels like I don't even understand what we were doing then."

"I guess you have to look at it positively though," Black interjects. "The only reason the albums are better now is because they were bad in the beginning."

And that dissatisfaction pushed them to where they are now. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Daft Punk GETTY IMAGES FILE

Daft Punk to perform with Stevie Wonder

For a group that had one of the top albums of the past year, Daft Punk has been keeping a low profile — even lower than the duo's disguise-happy public persona would suggest.

Since releasing their hit Random Access Memories in May, the helmeted ones haven't even performed live in front of an audience.

But when you're nominated for five Grammys, that's kind of a command performance, especially when one of those nominations is for Album of the Year.

In the grand tradition of unlikely Grammy pairings that actually make a lot of musical sense, Daft Punk will be performing with Motown legend Stevie Wonder, the show's executive producer Ken Ehrlich told Rolling Stone.

Rolling Stone also reported that Pharrell Williams and Nile Rodgers will perform with Daft Punk, so you can expect a rendition of their mega-hit, Get Lucky. METRO

What with ice storms and snow and cold snaps, we could all use a bit of sand and surf right about now. Here's a look at eight of my favourite beaches in North America and the Caribbean.

Trunk Bay, St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands

Perhaps the prettiest beach I've ever seen, with incredible water and even an underwater snorkelling trail you can follow. There's hardly a building in sight, the water is calm and there are great views of the British Virgin Islands.

Napili Beach, Maui, Hawaii

A perfect crescent of soft sand on a beach where no building can go more than two stories high. Safe for kids at the north end and decent body-surfing at the south end, plus awesome views of nearby Molokai and killer sunsets.

Miami

Yeah, this is an obvious, easy one. But how can you resist the pretty people and great bars and the luscious Art Deco architecture? Try the SoHo Beach House for an artsy hotel stay or strut your stuff on Haulover Beach, one of the few legal nude beaches in the U.S.

water, you can gaze at the lovely rock formations or soak in the view of Mayan ruins overlooking the sea.

Valley Church, Antigua

The soft, white sand goes

Capitola, Calif.

I once called this village the best California surf town. The Beach Boys never sang about. There's a pier for viewing sea lions or surfers and several rows of colourful homes right on the sand.

Hanalei Beach, Kauai, Hawaii

A gorgeous, long stretch on the north coast. It can be rainy here but the views of the nearby mountains are glorious. The beach was featured in the movie The Descendants with George Clooney. I don't think you'll see him, but hope springs eternal, doesn't it?

Luxury meets ease: Bacon-Wrapped Scallops

Appetizer. What do you do if unexpected guests pop up at your door? Serve this super simple dish

Bacon-wrapped scallops are one of the most luxurious appetizers you can serve, not to mention one of the easiest to prepare.

Because there are only two main ingredients in this dish, you need to make sure you use the best quality — the biggest, freshest sea scallops you can find, and the most flavourful bacon. After that, they are so easy to grill that you hardly need a recipe.

There are two types of scallops, but only one of them is appropriate for the grill.

Tiny bay scallops are so sweet, you can eat them raw or just lightly sautéed. But they also are more expensive and not suited for grilling. What you want are the larger, less expensive sea scallops.

This all-protein finger food appetizer is perfect for entertaining. It's simple to prep and quick to cook. You even could prepare them in advance.

Pre-cook the bacon to render some of the fat and make it soft and pliable for wrapping around the scallops. Then just refrigerate until your guests arrive and pop them on the grill when you want them.

They pair well with a simple maple-mustard sauce that is delicious dolloped on top of the scallops just before serving.

1. Heat the oven to 400 F. Set a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet. Heat the grill to medium-high.

2. In a small bowl, mix together the mustard and maple syrup. Set aside.

3. Use paper towels to blot dry the scallops. Arrange them on a plate, then set aside.

4. Arrange the bacon in a single layer on the rack over the baking sheet. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes, or until just starting to cook.

Cooking tip

The scallops take very little time to cook, so you can cook the bacon in the oven or microwave for a couple of minutes before you wrap it around the scallops. That way, you are guaranteed to get crispy bacon and tender scallops.

Do not fully cook the bacon. Remove the bacon from the oven. If too hot to handle, let cool for several minutes. Once the bacon can be handled, wrap one slice of bacon around each scallop. Secure in place by threading one of the toothpicks through the bacon and scallop.

5. Use a pastry brush to lightly brush the tops and bottoms of the scallops with bacon fat from the pan. Season with salt and pepper. Grill for 2 to 3 minutes per side. Serve with the sauce for dolloping a bit onto each.

Chuck the decor and get your foot back out the door

Of resolutions and resumé. How to get your head into the job-hunt game now that the nutcracker's been returned to storage

LEAH RUEHLICKE
Metro World News

Presents have been opened, Santa has come and gone and all that remains from your holiday baking is that gingerbread house no one knows if they're actually supposed to eat or not.

The holidays are officially over, but there are some lingering holiday lessons you can use when it comes to your job search.

The new year is the perfect time for some classic out-with-the-old, in-with-the-new thinking, so reflect upon your seasonal cheer and use it to move forward in landing your dream job.

Embrace your inner snowflake

As the saying goes, no two snowflakes are alike — and the same should go for you.

Managers and recruiters interview hundreds of people a month. They've heard the typical rehearsed answers time and time again.

What they're looking for is something different: that

Put your game face on and get your sensational self out there. ISTOCK something that makes you unique and sets you apart from everyone else with the same qualifications you have.

That's not to say don't prepare, but let your personality shine through when answering what your biggest strengths and weaknesses are.

Make like a Christmas cookie and be fresh

No guest wants to eat baking that's drowning in freezer burn or has been sitting on the counter for the past three weeks.

Put your best foot forward when hosting that potluck and fill your house with freshness.

Similarly, pull yourself together when handing out resumé's or going on interviews.

No one's going to hire the tired-eyed youngster with dishevelled hair.

If you look put together, your job search will naturally follow.

Believe in Santa Claus

When you're handing out endless applications and hearing nothing in return, it's easy to get discouraged and make the job hunt seem impossible.

The existence of good ol' Saint Nick also seems a tad implausible — but there's something about him that makes you want to believe in him.

Foster that into your job search as well. Believe in the impossible and power through. Santa (and your bank account) will thank you.

Sussing out your CV support group

Reference check.

You can never have too many individuals singing your praise on the job hunt

MEGHAN GREAVES

Metro World News

During your studies and the early stages of your work life, you'll develop relationships with all sorts of different individuals and you never know how these relationships may help you down the road when starting your career search.

Your part-time employer, a mentor that you had while completing a campus or school project, a career counsellor, a professor or a peer with whom you worked on a big project are all examples of people who can become useful professional connections.

How to do it

Ask as you go

One of the easiest ways to build your references is to treat the connection process as an on-going activity. This will help you avoid scrambling to remember all your important contacts when you need them.

Be sure to ask your potential references if they would be willing to give you a professional or personal reference letter, depending on the situation, once your work with them is complete.

If you aren't sure about the strength of your connection, stay in contact and work on building a relationship through email.

It's not just about who you know, it's about the people you know who think you've got plenty to offer. ISTOCK

Don't be afraid to ask

Asking someone for a reference doesn't have to be a daunting task — you've likely already established a good relationship with them.

Also, it isn't mandatory to ask for a reference face-to-face. Though this is the most formal way to ask for a reference, if the idea truly puts you out of your comfort zone or you can't meet with the person, over the phone or via email works well too.

Keep it brief

Asking for a reference shouldn't be a speech about your life and why you deserve a reference from the person. Explain why you'd like them to be a reference and ask if they're comfortable doing so.

You don't want to waste their time — let them guide the conversation.

Why it's important to start now

Gives you credibility

Having references (you should aim to have at least three when applying for a job) shows that you have been able to take on multiple tasks and successfully complete them. Volunteer experiences, work experiences, projects or participation in different societies are all good examples of tasks that require dedication and purpose.

Potential employers want to know that they're investing in someone who won't get up and leave at a moment's notice. Having references to back you up only makes you more credible.

Supports your resumé

Anyone can make claims on a resumé. While you can't have a reference for every single item on your resumé, having a variety of references for different skills — organizational skills, leadership skills, marketing skills — makes every part of your resumé more substantial.

If you have different contacts to pull from, then you also have the ability to tailor your references to each job application.

This can give you an edge and makes you more employable.

Isn't it time to throw in the towel, old-timer?

The 'lump of labour' theory. Will a surge of older workers take jobs from the young? Economists say the opposite is true

It's an assertion that has been accepted as fact by droves of the unemployed: Older people remaining on the job later in life are stealing jobs from young people.

One problem, many economists say: It isn't supported by a wisp of fact.

"We all cannot believe that we have been fighting this theory for more than 150 years," said April Yanyuan Wu, a research economist at the Center for Retirement Research at Boston College, who co-authored a paper last year on the subject.

The commonly accepted vision of a surge of workers looks like this: A young post-doctoral student dreams of a full-time teaching job at their university, but there are no openings. An 80-something professor who has remained on the job long past what's considered "normal" retirement is blamed.

The problem with that vision is that there are probably full-time teaching positions available elsewhere, or the person blocking the young grad student from the job is only 40 years old, economists say.

Who's going to dominate the future workforce? ISTOCK

Further, the veteran professor's decision to stay employed and productive may stir other job growth. He may bring research grants to his university allowing for other hiring, may take on assistants, and may be able to dine out and shop and fuel the economy more than if he weren't on the job.

None of that would have happened had he retired.

The theory Wu and other economists are fighting is known as "lump of labour," and it has maintained traction in the U.S., particularly in a climate of high unemployment. The theory dates to 1851 and says if a group enters the labour market — or in this case, remains in it beyond their normal retirement date — others will be unable to gain employment or will have their hours cut.

It's a line of thinking that has been used in the U.S. immigration debate, in Europe to validate early retirement programs and it relies on a simple premise: that there are a fixed number of jobs available. In fact, most economists dispute this. When women entered the workforce, there weren't fewer jobs for men. The economy simply expanded.

The same is true with older workers, they argue.

"There's no evidence to support that increased employment by older people is going to hurt younger people in any way," said Alicia Munnell, director of the Center for Retirement Research and the co-author with Wu of Are Aging Baby Boomers Squeezing Young Workers Out of Jobs?

"It's not going to reduce their wages, it's not going to do anything bad to them," Munnell said.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some remain unconvinced

James Galbraith, a professor of government at the University of Texas at Austin, has advocated for a temporary lowering of the age to qualify for Social Security and Medicare to allow older workers who don't want to remain on the job a way to exit and to spur openings for younger workers.

- He doesn't buy the comparison of older workers to women entering the workforce and says others' arguments on older workers expanding the economy don't make sense when there are so many unemployed people. If there was a surplus of jobs, he said, there would be no problem with people working longer. But there isn't.

- "I can't imagine how you could refute that. The older worker retires, the employer looks around and hires another worker," he said. "It's like refuting elementary arithmetic."

Get tough and drop those pounds

Resolutions. Bold and controversial strategies to get fit and healthy for the new year

Fat Loser! Mental Toughness Training for Dieters, by Steve Siebold, is a book filled with 101 bold (and somewhat controversial) strategies to help anyone struggling with weight loss get fit and healthy once and for all. Siebold's top weight loss resolutions include:

Comply or die: Imagine informing your spouse you have been 99 per cent faithful in your marriage. You wouldn't be shocked at the incredulous reaction, yet we have been brainwashed to believe diets are different. They aren't. Success with your diet means 100 per cent commitment, which is why most people don't succeed.

Stop waiting to be rescued: Stop waiting for the drug company's magic pill. Stop waiting for your doctor to scold you. Stop waiting for the government to save you. No one is coming to the rescue. You aren't a child and it's time to stop eating like one. No one but you can save yourself from being fat.

Stop socializing with fat people: This is one of Siebold's most controversial strategies — who wants to be told to avoid good friends just because of what they weigh? The reality is that fit people aren't better than fat people. Yet consciousness is contagious. The more you listen to fat people complain about the difficulties of dieting and working out, the more you will descend to their level of thinking. Be around fit people.

Grow up emotionally: Get brutally honest and begin to see yourself through the eyes of objective reality — that is, how you really look as opposed to how you wish you looked. This can be a bitter pill to swallow. But once you do it, the emotional burden of being fat will begin to fade. Emotional maturity, fitness and better health can begin to take shape instead.

Expect to pay the price: There is a price to pay if you want to get fit. No one gets a free ride, and no one negotiates their way out of doing the work and enduring the pain. You are already paying the price for being overweight, so pay the price one time to become a fat loser — the good kind — and reap the rewards permanently.

Siebold says that, considering all the information available on the threats of obesity, it's time to stop being stupid, stop playing Russian roulette, wise up, get tough and be an example to other fat people instead of a cautionary tale.

While his message is tough, he speaks from personal experience and is a former pro athlete who turned into what he calls a "fat tub of lard." He lost all the weight and today is in the best shape of his life and has a goal of ending the obesity epidemic worldwide. For more, visit fatloser.com.

Rev up the romance in your relationship

The holidays tend to be stressful and busy, leaving little time and energy for romance and intimacy. According to a recent K-Y survey, 54 per cent of Canadians have experienced a sexual dry spell. Whether you are in your 20s or 50s, start the year off right by reconnecting with your partner.

Relationship expert Josey Vogels suggests these ideas.

Prioritize: Put your relationship first and make each other a priority. With the hassles of everyday life it's easy to take your partner for granted. Make sure you both know how important you are to one another by complimenting each other whenever possible.

Communicate: Work on your communication by not only listening to your partner but also speaking up. Stop worrying about being right and really listen to what your partner is saying. Encourage open dialogue between each other by dedicating one day a week to share your sexual needs, desires and frustrations.

Take time to reconnect with your partner this year. COLOURBOX

Be affectionate: Being more affectionate can increase feelings of intimacy. Even if it's brief, holding hands, cuddling before bed or kissing hello and goodbye can have tremendous health benefits and build feelings of connectedness between couples.

Play together: Instead of turning on the TV, dust off Monopoly or pull a deck of cards out and have a game night to create those feelings of connectedness.

Be adventurous: When you first started dating everything was new and exciting but after years, or decades, things become pretty routine. Step out of your comfort zone by trying something new together.

Team Canada staff stands by decisions

Olympic hockey. Kunitz, Marleau, Carter among questioned picks with likes of St. Louis, Giroux on outside looking in

For more than four months, Team Canada's management staff anguished over these decisions.

Still, it took until 1 a.m. ET Tuesday — 10 hours before the team was to be unveiled — for executive director Steve Yzerman and his staff to come up with a final 25-man roster for the Sochi Olympics.

"We had gone out last night for dinner and came back. We were down to a couple of names and it was a real strong, healthy debate," St. Louis Blues

Canada's 25-man roster

Defencemen. Jay Bouwmeester, Drew Doughty, Dan Hamhuis, Duncan Keith, Alex Pietrangelo, P.K. Subban, Marc-Edouard Vlasic, Shea Weber.

Forwards. Jamie Benn, Patrice Bergeron, Jeff Carter, Sidney Crosby, Matt Duchene, Ryan Getzlaf, Chris Kunitz, Patrick Marleau, Rick Nash, Corey Perry, Patrick Sharp, Steven Stamkos, John Tavares, Jonathan Toews.

general manager Doug Armstrong said. "At some point we had to stop at 25. When we got to that last name, we shook hands and said we're excited about this team."

With another gold medal the only measure of success, Yzerman, Armstrong and the rest of the management team read off names one by one, listing the group they hope will get the job done. Chris Kunitz, leaves an empty feeling in your stomach."

As difficult as those decisions and conversations were, they were necessary.

In the final analysis, Canada chose to put together a team of "different dimensions," in the words of Detroit Red Wings GM Ken Holland. Kunitz brings natural chemistry with Sidney Crosby, Marleau a mix of speed and scoring and Carter a nose for the net.

"The decisions, the late-night wrangling, it's like you go over things four, five, six, seven times," Chiarelli said. "Is this the right reason? Is this the right guy? What's the right reason? We talked about four or five guys at the end, and you have second thoughts, and you just got to be firm on what you believe and the fit."

Senators earning wild-card reputation as they eye playoff run

THE HOCKEY NEWS

ottawa@metronews.ca

Last week's spotlight was on Bobby Ryan and the fallout of not being named to the United States' 25-man Olympic roster. After reading the terse comments directed at him and hearing the subsequent apology, Ryan handled the situation with class.

This put a damper on what should be the main focus for the Senators — their four-game winning streak, and five-of-six stretch, which put them back into playoff wild-card contention.

There are several reasons for the club's turn-around:

Home sweet home — Since Dec. 1, the Senators are 7-3-2 at Canadian Tire Centre. Prior to that their home play was anything but sweet; the club's record was 4-7-2.

Practice makes perfect — The Senators are the league's No. 1-ranked team in taking minor penalties with 201. However, it's no coincidence the club's win streak is largely due to an improved penalty kill. Chris Phillips leads all Senators, averaging 3:40 of ice time on a PK that has been successful on the past 20 of 21 opportunities. This includes games versus Sidney Crosby, Alex Ovechkin and two against the Bruins.

Andy's back — He was never gone, but goaltender Craig Anderson is quickly returning to the form that placed him among the NHL's elite last season. Anderson is victorious in five consecutive starts and is 8-1-2 in the past month.

Second verse, same as the first — When key players went down with injuries last season, the Senators became the Pesky Sens and pulled together. During their recent stretch, Phillips missed a pair of games, Chris Neil the past two and he may be out longer. Captain Jason Spezza will likely return Wednesday after being absent for all four wins due to a hip-flexor injury.

Mika and friends — With Spezza out, coach Paul MacLean has loosened the reins on Mika Zibanejad. The 2011 sixth-overall draft pick is displaying his potential between Milan Michalek and Cory Conacher. The trio has combined for 11 points during the streak.

The Senators are in a logjam with several teams vying for a wild-card position, but they can only worry about themselves. Their next three games are versus Central Division foes, against which the team is a respectable 2-2-1.

NBA

Cavs deal Bynum, draft picks to Bulls for Deng

With their season quickly sliding toward yet another trip to the NBA lottery, the Cleveland Cavaliers had to do something to slow their freefall toward irrelevance.

The Cavs acquired Luol Deng, a two-time All-Star small forward with Chicago, early Tuesday in a trade with the Bulls for Andrew Bynum, the enigmatic centre whom Cleveland signed to a unique contract during the summer but recently dismissed for detrimental conduct.

Cleveland also gave Chicago a first-round pick from Sacramento, two second-round selections and gave the Bulls the right to swap first-round choices in 2015 if the Cavs are not in the lottery.

The Bulls then waived Bynum, who has chronically bad knees and has played just 24 games the past two seasons. Bynum was due another $6 million on his two-year, $24-million contract he signed with Cleveland in July, and the Bulls would have had to pay him if he was kept past Tuesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Skiing. Knee setbacks will keep 'devastated' Lindsey Vonn off Sochi slopes

Less than two weeks after reconstructive surgery on her right knee in February 2013, Lindsey Vonn already was sounding a positive note, saying she was "really looking forward to Sochi" and defending her Olympic downhill gold medal.

Along the way to the next Winter Games, though, Vonn began facing setbacks. As she'd move past one, another would surface. In the end, it was too much, even for Vonn, the most accomplished U.S. ski racer in history. Expected to be one of the biggest stars at these Olympics, Vonn announced Tuesday — exactly one month before the opening ceremony — she won't be able to race in Russia.

In a Facebook post, Vonn said she is "devastated" to miss the Olympics, "but the reality has sunk in that my knee is just too unstable to compete at this level."

Her personal publicist, Lewis Kay, said in a statement the 29-year-old from Vail, Colo., will have knee surgery again "shortly."

Like many in her risk-filled sport, Vonn has dealt with injuries often, particularly at major events. She withdrew mid-way through the 2011 world championships because of a concussion. She raced with a severely bruised shin at the last Olympics. She skipped a race at the 2009 worlds after slicing her thumb open on a champagne bottle. She hurt her knee in training and missed a pair of races at the 2007 worlds. She took a scary fall during training at the 2006 Olympics, then left the hospital to compete.

"She's come back. She'll be back," Vonn's father, Alan Kildow, said in a telephone interview. "You'll see a lot of Lindsey Vonn in the future."

Santa Fe takes on a snowstorm

Review. A 300-plus kilometre night-time trek in treacherous weather reveals the Hyundai model's winter prowess

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
drive@metronews.ca

Mother Nature was all crabby-pants during my recent December test of the latest Hyundai Santa Fe, so she dumped about two feet of snow all over my hometown, then made the mercury plummet like Miley Cyrus's artistic standards.

Temperatures landed somewhere around 30 below, which is (delightfully) too cold for road salt to work. Prior to this, there was snow. Lots of snow. The second big, "all-night-long" dumping of the season. It left over a foot on the ground.

Naturally, I did what I always do when there's an all-night-long dumping of snow up here in Sudbury, Ont. I grabbed some buddies, some large double-doubles, and drove repeatedly around every unplowed back road I could find.

A few nights after this, I travelled 300 kilometres down Highway 69 after dark. That distance was spread evenly between extreme cold over frozen hard-packed ice-stripes and then slightly warmer temperatures accompanied by zero-visibility, blowing snow, and deep powder. A few noteworthy points about the wintertime driving experience of the tested 2013 Santa Fe 2.0T Limited AWD came to light in the process.

Proper ESC Calibration

In many winter situations, wheelspin is a good thing—and most of the time, the ESC in

Tires

All wheel drive, ABS brakes and electronic stability control DO NOT make traction. The only way to increase the physical grip between a vehicle and a slippery road is with proper tires. Electronic aids or not, riding all-season tires in conditions like these would result in poor directional stability.

Xenon lights

My only complaint: xenon lights are typically great in a snowstorm. The ones in the Santa Fe were adequate, not mind-blowing. In clear conditions, they're more than adequate. For some reason, the light output diminishes notably when there's even a small amount of snow or ice on the lenses — and there's no washer system.

the Santa Fe allows enough of it. Wheelspin allows snow to be flung from the treads for better contact with the ground beneath the tires — so when you give Santa Fe the boots coming out of a parking lot and onto a busy street, it lets the wheels spin a little faster than they can grip to ensure you get moving quickly. In real life, this is more favorable than overly aggressive ESC systems that numb the throttle at any sign of wheelspin, cross their arms, report your activities to the fun police, and leave you throttleless in front of traffic. Ultimately, you'll feel like you're calling the shots, not the vehicle — and that's a good thing.

Hill Start Assist

Stop on a hill, and Santa Fe freezes the pressure in the brake lines for a few seconds while your foot moves from the brakes to the gas. This prevents rollback, makes life easier for the transmission, and also makes it far more likely that you'll get moving again after being stopped on an icy incline. After all, nothing's more embarrassing than holding up traffic while you spin all four tires and slide backwards like a sucker. The tester wore Hankook Winter I-Cept Evo tires in its 19-inch OEM size. I found them a nicely balanced all-round winter performance tire. They're perhaps slightly more slippery during hard braking and acceleration than a Michelin X-Ice or Pirelli Sot-tozero, but they are remarkably stable in a straight line and while steering.

AWD Done Right

Santa Fe's AWD system is clever and well set up for driving in nasty winter weather. The AWD system uses inputs from numerous sensors to pre-engage 4-wheel power in many situations when accelerating from a stop. Even with extremely light throttle in deep snow, it'll often power all four wheels from a stand still — preemptively increasing traction instead of letting the front wheels slip before engaging the rear ones. Otherwise, when the system brings the rear wheels online for propulsion, they engage quickly—within about 2 or 3 revolutions of the front wheels, and get a good share of engine power. This AWD system isn't shy about calling the rear wheels into play, and when all four tires spin, power is split actively to maximize extraction of available traction. There's even a 'lock' setting to pre-set the system into a 50/50 power split, though I never needed to use it. No issues with needless tire spinning or harshness during shifting power between the front and rear. In virtually any situation, this setup feels like it knows what it's doing.

Finally

After arriving at my destination, there was approximately 147 pounds of salty brown filthy road-guck frozen to the underside of the Santa Fe's front doors. Thankfully, those front doors actually cover the structural rocker panel where this frozen mess typically accumulates on most rides. Open the door, and the mess goes with it, revealing a clean-as-a-whistle surface to step over and keeping your pants clean.

Brush up on your automotive art

Autoknow. Time for a career change? Meet three guys who are glad they dropped their jobs to follow their passion

wheelbasemedia.com

A sketch pencil and paper, an airbrush and whiteboard and a paintbrush and canvas.

They are three distinct styles, represented by three different artists, three roads to success, one common theme.

Automotive artistry is certainly a niche market; finding buyers interested in a vehicle portrait to hang above their mantel is never easy. But for legendary auto artists Tom Fritz, Dean Loucks and Ed Tillrock, turning their passion and creativity into life's work is the only way they know.

"Most 50 or 60-year-old women don't want a painting of a car or motorcycle in their living room," said Fritz, whose oil paintings of muscle cars from the '60s and '70s became so popular, the United States Postal Service turned them into a series of Forever postage stamps. "So you have to find where that niche market is and that takes a period of struggle because you have to make a living. It's a nuisance to starve."

None of these three popular artists falls under the starving category. As a matter of fact, each has done very well.

Fritz, 56, spent about 25 years working in military design as a staff artist at Northrop Grumman and other defense firms.

"All the while I knew I didn't want to spend my career drawing nuts and bolts. I was a painter. I was an artist."

Through his artistic versatility, Loucks, 49, didn't need long to turn his creative conceptions into tangible riches. From vehicle paintings and murals, to specialized boat and RV customization, Loucks (deanloucksart.com) will take on any expressive challenge.

"Paintings of cars, painting on a car, painting a motor home, painting an aircraft, a helicopter ... it's all art," said Loucks. "It's just on a different canvas."

Tillrock, 61, traded a career in architecture about five years ago to chase a dream and sketch by pencil the automotive inspirations

Diversity is the key to Dean Loucks' success as an automotive artist. How so? He'll apply his craft to just about anything, from paper to vehicles to kitchen appliances.

As you can see Loucks' works have that distinct melting effect, evident above and on the Porsche.

that moved him when he was barely old enough to even pick up a pencil.

"Kind of weird to change your career more or less at the end of it, but really, the only thing wrong with it is I wish I would have done this 20 years ago."

The three artists have vastly different approaches to their work but they share the same critical components of pride, passion and a natural ability that was evident at a very young age.

Looking for a few bucks and a break in high school, Loucks and a buddy began airbrushing automobile images on T-shirts at a little mall in Elkhart, Ind. Within about five years after graduation, Loucks took his talents to California where he ended up charging more than $250 for a T-shirt and about $700 for a jean jacket customized with his auto designs.

"It has kind of been my whole life," Loucks said. "I have always just loved cars."

Loucks just loves to paint. Period.

And his subjects include racing helmets, motorcycles, fuel tanks and pianos, as well as customized toasters and stand mixers for KitchenAid; design patterns that include leopard-skin, the Amer-

Ed Tillrock got into automotive art when architecture work began drying up a few years back. Any regrets? Maybe not starting sooner? He produces stunning works using pencil and paper. ALL IMAGES WHEELBASE ican flag, exotic floral, and anything else imaginable. Strange as it sounds, this two-piece kitchen set can cost nearly $3,000 US.

What makes Loucks' work so catching is an artistic style that is all his own. Using a technique he calls the "art of removal," Loucks takes kind of a reverse approach to his designs and execution, using paint reducers, thinners, and a "blast" mode on his paint gun to spread and disperse the colours and create a distinct melting look to many of his creations.

"There are a lot of custom painters out there," said Loucks, who often works out of his multi-million dollar mansion near his hometown of Goshen, Ind. "All the different things we paint ... what I am doing to them is art."

For Tillrock (edtillock.com), his expressive method is simpler but no less beautiful: a pencil and paper. Old-school is the best way to describe this baby boomer, who made a comfortable living in architecture until the design work dried up about six years ago, right along with the Chicago economy.

Almost a blessing in disguise, Tillrock said he "flipped the switch," put 40 years of architectural work on the back burner and took his automotive sketches to sell at the Detroit Autorama, which is an annual showcase of customized hotrods, and a perfect stage for Tillrock to promote his love of automobiles and start a new career chapter.

"I would consider that [show] a pretty good success and kind of a starting point," said Tillrock, who finds it ironic that a man in his 60s relies on Facebook, Instagram, and other social media to market his work.

Fritz's work (fritzart.com) celebrates the automotive eras and history that influenced him while growing up in San Fernando, Calif. His style is so regarded and recognizable, he was commissioned by Harley Davidson for a series of paintings in 2003 to commemorate the 100th birthday of the legendary motorcycle.

"It's been a long slow process, and it continues to be that way," Fritz said of the decades needed to become a success. "It's fun as hell because I sit here and color all day, but it's not an easy occupation. In order to get stuff on peoples' wall, you really have to work at it."

Race with Anki

Think of Anki Drive as a kind of three-dimensional video game. Developed by Anki (pronounced: On key), a San Francisco robotics company, the product consists of a roll-up oval-track layout containing special built-in electronics that transmit data to optical sensors located beneath each race car. The cars are driven through an app that's downloaded to your iPhone, iPod Touch or iPad, which turns the device into a race controller. Anki Drive's "artificial intelligence" that's built into the system (no Internet connection required) allows one player to compete against up to three other players or against the system that assigns specific characteristics to each car. Anki Drive is priced at $200 US for the base set that includes two cars. Visit anki.com

Rear seat lock up

According to the makers of Xtralock, the third-row seats on GM vehicles, specifically the Chevrolet Tahoe and Suburban, GMC Yukon and Cadillac Escalade, have become highly prized by thieves. They can be removed in as little as six seconds and sold for as much as $2,500 US to unscrupulous repair shops or directly on classified-ad websites. The third-row locking system created by Xtralock was designed by a locksmith to help prevent such theft. The three-piece unit can be installed without the use of tools and, once locked in place, makes the seat virtually impossible to remove without a key. In addition, the Xtralock's obvious visibility should also deter criminals from even attempting to steal the seat. The Xtralock sells for $180 US and can be purchased at xtralock.com.

Flip your jeep's lid

Talk to any current-generation (2007-14) Jeep Wrangler JK owner and they'll wax poetic about their favourite off-roader. But ask them about removing and reinstalling the canvas top and the air is likely to turn blue. In short, it's no fun wrestling with the various snaps, zippers and attachments. A solution is the power-operated MyTop from Roadwire of Austin, Tex. The company states that its top, which is constructed using Haartz Stayfast fabric and extra-thick clear plastic windows, will automatically fold back and reverse in about six seconds. The frame is made of aircraft-grade aluminum, while the electric motors used in the folding/refolding process are of the same design used to operate the canopies of fighter jets. MyTop is available for two-door JKs only and is priced at $4,700 US. Buy one at roadwire.com.

A little fashion mojo

Recycling old, worn-out autos keeps them out of landfills. Artist and fashion accessory designer Pyper Hugos has taken that to a whole new level with her line of Mojo Reclaimed Jewelry for men and women. The pieces are created from bits of parts and scraps found in junkyards. Most of her hand-crafted rings, bracelets and necklaces contain the colours imbedded in the metal that add to their patina. As well, each piece comes with its own name and history: the "Elva" pendant shown here was originally a part of a 1973 Chevrolet pickup. Prices vary from $65 US for a set of earrings, up to $175 US plus shipping for a cuff-style bracelet. Visit Hugos' online store at yougot-mojo.bigcartel.com.

Automakers cosy up to electronics industry

Consumer Electronic Show. Car companies turn out in force to showcase such things as laser high-beam headlights and the solar panel roof

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Billed as the world's largest technology trade show, the Consumer Electronic Show (CES) in Las Vegas is eagerly anticipated by the geeky gadget crowd, and pointedly ignored by folks at the other end of the spectrum, who think the world went to crap around 1980, when computers and microchips first arrived in force and started taking over our souls.

The automakers have become very interested of late in CES, and this year's show happening right now has a record nine automakers participating.

Their presence seems not so much as an opportunity to show off their new tech stuff — which they do all the time at auto shows — but more as a way to integrate themselves into the Silicon Valley culture and leverage the exciting technology coming forth from the consumer electronics industry.

Automakers increasingly need to be in that faster-moving milieu. Product cycles in the auto industry are five years or longer. The consumer electronic industry works a bit faster, yes?

And technology seems to be a more collaborative endeavour than it's ever been: witness the announcement at CES that Audi, GM, Google, Honda, Hyundai and NVIDIA have joined together to form the Open Automotive Alliance (OAA) to bring the Android platform to cars.

"The worlds of consumer and automotive technologies have never been more closely aligned, and this alliance will only pave the way for faster innovation," said Ricky Hudi, head of electrics and electronics development at Audi AG.

Audi is displaying its Sport Quattro concept car at CES. The hybrid sports coupe is brimming with technology, but I'm focused on its laser high-beam headlights. Yes, lasers. Apparently, the high beams have a range of 500 metres — roughly twice the distance of regular high beams. Lasers are also very energy efficient. Their primary downsides are cost and an intolerance of heat. In the future those drawbacks should be overcome, and experts predict they will peacefully coexist with LED lights, which still have a lot of love to give.

Hyundai announced its new Genesis sedan would be integrated with the amazing Google Glass. Drivers won't be able to use the futuristic glasses while driving, but integrated software will let drivers do all sorts of "pre-drive" functions with them, such as remote start, navigation and music settings.

Ford's major CES display is the Ford C-MAX Solar Energi Concept. Like all C-Max plug-in hybrids, this concept can be charged by its on-board charger running off the gasoline engine and by plugging it into the grid. The concept goes one step further, with a solar panel roof that provides the same electricity as a four-hour plug-in session, although it would need a full day's worth of daylight to make it happen.

Similar to a magnifying glass, the Concept's "concentrator" solar panel roof also has a patent-pending system that tracks the sun as it moves from east to west.

The concept is a collaborative project between Ford, SunPower Corp. and the Georgia Institute of Technology. The institute will begin to test the vehicle in real-world scenarios for its feasibility as a production car. Such a vehicle would be particularly awesome in places where the electrical grid sucks or just doesn't exist.

Experts trying to give vehicles their voice

Automotive communication.

Researchers are figuring out the best way for your car to talk to you

JIL
MCINTOSH
Drive@metronews.ca

Although it can't carry on a conversation, your car communicates with you. Depending on how it's equipped, this can be anything from a warning when your seat belt isn't fastened, to chimes and lights if there's a vehicle alongside when you're trying to change lanes.

But those warning signals aren't randomly selected: "It requires significant testing and development," says Birsan Donmez, an assistant professor of industrial engineering at the University of Toronto, who is working on a safety feedback program for Toyota. "Not everyone might react the same way to the same type of

To note

- Warnings aren't the only issue. Researchers also look at incentives such as fuel economy gauges, to be sure they aren't too distracting.

- With and without. In addition to seeing how subjects react to feedback, researchers also look at how they drive when it's taken away afterwards, to see how effective it is.

- Admissions. Test subjects are more likely to admit they do something, such as texting while driving, if they think other people are okay with it, but are less likely to admit anti-social behaviours such as impaired driving.

feedback, and the issue is to understand how to personalize these systems, because humans are so variable."

While Donmez isn't designing the actual systems, she's researching how drivers react to the feedback they're get-

What does your vehicle communicate to you and how do you respond to it? JIL MCINTOSH/METRO ting, and what types are most effective for the maximum number of drivers. The system must be effective enough to get the driver's attention, but can't be so distracting that it diverts all of the driver's focus, and he or she ends up hitting the object that initially triggered the warning.

Factors that go into feedback design include what sets off a warning, such as speeding or wandering out of the lane; when the warning goes off; if it's visual or makes a sound, or both; how long it's on, and what information it provides to the driver.

Researchers use a variety of methods for testing, including focus groups, questionnaires to assess the risks that drivers might take, and driving simulators. For some projects, the test subjects drive in real-world conditions.

In one analysis, Donmez worked with Transport Canada to monitor a group of drivers and their reaction to vehicle feedback when they were speeding or following too close to the vehicle in front. Not only did this provide information on the feedback, but it also let the researchers determine which drivers reacted most strongly to it, which could allow engineers to design systems that deliver the greatest assistance.

With so many individual drivers though, the system has to be geared toward providing benefit for a maximum number of people. "We go for the average, rather than each individual driver, unless it poses a danger for some drivers," Donmez says.

"At the worst case, you don't see a benefit (for every driver), but you don't see a decline in performance. You don't want to endanger anyone with the system."

Check transmission on used Sport Trac

Second gear.

2007-2010
Ford Explorer
Sports Trac

JUSTIN
drive@metronews.ca

With an eye for flexibility, capability and style, the Ford Explorer Sport Trac hit its second generation for 2007 and was carried on until 2010. The dressed-up four-door pickup was geared towards lifestyle-oriented shoppers, and included four-wheel drive variants. Look for chrome accents, step-boards, navigation, a sunroof, leather seating, reverse park assist, a power rear window, Ford Sync and plenty more. A top-line 'Adrenaline' model adds more visual flare with a unique grille treatment, unique headlamps, 20-inch wheels and more.

mechanical in nature, and a Ford mechanic can help ensure that's the case. The six-speed transmission and V8 engine combination looks like the safest bet. The five-speed automatic and V6 engine combination isn't recommended, due to additional problems reported frequently in the owner's community. That's right fellas: the V8 is your best bet, here. Drive slowly while turning and listen for any unwelcomed popping, clicking or grinding sounds, which could indicate a problem with the rear differential or wheel bearings. Note that any sloppiness to the steering over bumps, possibly coupled with unwelcomed sounds, could indicate a problem with the front suspension too. Cycle through the four-wheel drive modes, ensuring all engage and disengage as outlined in the owner's manual.

Common issues

Transmission problems come up first and foremost when checking out reliability of this generation Sport Trac. Signs of trouble on your test-drive include slipping, hesitation or roughness from the gear shifts, especially when switching between reverse and drive. In most cases, the problems are computer-related, not

What owners like

Sport Trac owners tend to rave about the available Pioneer stereo system, easy-to-clean interior, flexibility, space, traction, and a solid, tough and rugged feel. Performance with the V8 engine is also highly rated.

What owners dislike

Common gripes include difficulty accessing cargo due to Sport Trac's deep bed, some cheap interior trim, fuel mileage with the V8 engine, and cheap, flimsy door handles.

Engine

Shoppers could opt for a four-litre V6 with 210 horsepower, or a 4.6 litre, 292-horsepower V8. An automatic transmission was standard on all models and towing capacity was rated at 7,000 lbs.

The verdict

It's the capability, flexibility and utility of the Sport Trac that will likely work hardest to attract customers to used models. The Sport Trac with the V8 engine is likely the most reliable bet, but a mechanical check-over focusing on the transmission and rear differential should be considered mandatory ahead of your purchase.

Weighing the pros and cons of leasing

There are many factors to consider when deciding if leasing a vehicle is the best option.

To start with, you'll need to consider your lifestyle, as well as driving habits and financial circumstances before making any decisions.

For some initial insights, Chevrolet Canada gives us the right questions to ask alongside some valuable information:

What are the financial benefits of leasing?

Only the depreciation value of the vehicle is used to calculate monthly payments in comparison to the full price of the vehicle used in loan repayment calculations.

In addition, lease holders only pay taxes on their monthly payments and tax benefits are offered to those that are self-employed, as well as salespeople and some professionals.

How long do you intend to keep your vehicle? Keep in mind that lease terms are shorter than most financing terms. Lease holders get to drive a new vehicle more often with lease periods typically ranging from 36 to 48 months.

At the end of your lease period, you have the option to purchase the vehicle from your dealer at a reduced rate or upgrade to a newer model under a different contract.

What kind of vehicle would you like to drive?

Monthly payments for lease holders are typically lower than the payments of those who choose to finance. This means that drivers have the option of choosing a more luxurious vehicle for a lower monthly payment.

What is the length of my commuting time?

There will typically be a kilometre limit during the period of the lease contract.

Potential lease holders should take an honest look at their driving habits and consider if the limit is realistic given their driving habits to avoid additional charges based on kilometres in excess of the limit.

Is maintenance included?

You should always speak with your local dealer about maintenance before signing your contract. Depending on the options available at your dealership, regular maintenance may be included.

If maintenance isn't included, the lease holder is still expected to return a properly maintained vehicle at the end of the contract period.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

This is one of those days when you would rather be anywhere than where you are supposed to be. If you can find a legit way out of the situation then go for it. But if you fail to turn up, you could create a powerful enemy.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Honest effort gets results, so keep plugging away at what you are working on and don't get dispirited if results are slow. Nothing you do is wasted and one day soon you will make that breakthrough you long for.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

It may appear as if someone is being deliberately obstructive, but you should ask yourself if there was something you said or did that could have turned them against you. If so, it's not too late to say sorry.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Why are you pessimistic about your prospects? You may not have gotten everything you wanted recently but there is always tomorrow. You'll feel positive closer to the weekend.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

No matter how unsettling the changes that are taking place may be, keep telling yourself that in the long-term they will work in your favour. Your life story is unfolding as it should.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Do something today that livens things up both at home and at work. Some may think you lost your senses but they are just the sort of people who have been dragging you down.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

This is an important time for you and you will be making major changes to your lifestyle. The full moon on the 16th will clear away obstacles. Between now and then, plan big.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It seems you have made an error of judgment and all you can do is say sorry. If you sound sincere, others will forgive you and you can move on. But if your apology is grudging, bad feelings are likely to linger.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Most times your hunches are spot on but the planets warn your instincts are not to be trusted today, so take care. This is one of those occasions when you must stick to facts.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Your relationship with authority may not be as good as it should be today, so watch what you say and be ready to back off if a conversation gets heated. You'll be the loser if it gets ugly.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may think someone is keeping something from you, but don't let it worry you. It's unlikely to be bad news and it's even possible they are planning some kind of surprise.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You must let a certain person know that you have no intention of allowing them to get rich at your expense. Today's Mars-Jupiter link will bring tensions to a head — say what's on your mind.
